

Natural Orders

Volume 1

Susanne Edelmann

Impressum

Bibliografische Information der Deutschen
Nationalbibliothek: Die Deutsche
Nationalbibliothek verzeichnet diese Publikation in der Deutschen Nationalbibliografie;
detaillierte bibliografische Daten sind im Internet
über dnb.dnb.de abrufbar.

©2023 Susanne Edelmann
Herstellung und Verlag: BoD – Books on Demand,
Norderstedt
ISBN: 9783739204109

Content

1. Introduction
2. Essential
 - 2.1 The natural, essential size
 - 2.2 Natural contacts and relationships
 - 2.3 Essential tasks
 - 2.4 Essential life-forms
3. Basic knowledge
 - 3.1 Natural orders are based on the essential self of a human being
 - 3.2 Natural orders respect natural limitations
 - 3.3 Natural orders promote life
 - 3.4 Natural orders are embedded in supportive structures
4. Education in the context of natural orders
 - 4.1 Information that serves you, your life and your tasks
 - 4.2 Education is – acutally – free
 - 4.3 Natural Power
5. Health in the context of natural orders
 - 5.1 Secure
 - 5.2 Nourished
 - 5.3 Liveness
 - 5.4 Safe places
6. A few words at the end of this volume
 - 6.1 Life

1. Introduction

Natural orders are effortlessly simple and promote life. You don't have to enforce them, and you don't have to believe in them. Yet, you don't have to contort or to conform. But if you start living them, they will enrich you like nothing else can.

People long for natural orders. People long for a natural and fulfilled life. People crave natural and beneficial relationships. And people long for tasks that correspond to their (true) nature and their (actual) abilities and in which they can develop further.

The natural orders are easy to understand and easy to apply. They are deeply life-enhancing, beneficial and healing. Therefore, it is time that we introduce them and live them, in the human habitat.

There is great disorder in present human society. Immature people who cannot manage their own lives and are unable to take care of themselves are given power over entire countries. Yes, they are even given the power to disrupt and damage other countries over the long term. People who are significantly small take on managerial tasks and their only qualification is very often a certain degree. A degree that often says little about the actual human and managerial skills.

Nevertheless, the person concerned receives the post, along with the corresponding salary.

However, his naturally small size then unconsciously becomes a big issue for him, as he finds it difficult to lead those employees who are naturally bigger. Naturally, a holistically small person cannot lead a holistically bigger person. In this constellation, leadership is not possible without conscious use of violence and power. Violence is a very big topic in human life, and it is always used when the person concerned does not have natural power but has to demonstrate it externally.

Every human being has natural power. A subject that is not addressed, taught and lived in a healthy way, in the human habitat. This (natural) power corresponds to the natural size of a person and in order to be well, in yourself and in your own life, it is important to consciously seek this own natural size in a first step and then to know and live it. People very often live in a colorful mix of being overwhelmed and being underwhelmed. They don't know it any other way and yet, they are not happy in this unhealthy lifestyle.

If you want to deal with the natural orders in detail, it is essential that you deal with yourself very consciously and in detail. The natural orders are based on your essential self and as long as you do not know in yourself who you really are in your essence, you will not be able to live the natural orders and certainly not be able to implement them in the human living space.

The human environment has also become disordered because the truly great humans have conformed and veiled themselves. They have not acknowledged their natural true size. Not even when they became increasingly aware of it. And so, the reversal begins with the fact that you yourself seek and find your true being and then consciously allow it to be free and in its natural size. You will only be truly fulfilled and well when your natural being is allowed to be in its natural size. Violence is also, having to “correct” yourself downwards every day. Therefore, it's time for you to stop this behavior. Something that requires your conscious decision on the one hand, and your conscious permission on the other hand. So that your natural size can develop freely, and your practical life can then adapt accordingly.

You have to be very conscious of yourself for many years in order to be aware of your natural size, your natural abilities, your essential needs and your natural limits. And at the same time, this task is part of the natural basic task of every human being, actually. How are you going to lead a fulfilling life if you don't know yourself fully? What do you want to use as a guide in a challenging situation, when you are not firmly connected to your own inner core?

If you want to lead a truly fulfilled life, one that essentially corresponds to you, you cannot avoid consciously dealing with yourself over a longer period of time. To get to know yourself fully. Your abilities, your (natural) characteristics, your limits, your desires, your needs, your human and essential tasks. You have to know them all. Do you know them?

People are very often busy with all sorts of things.
Except with themselves.

In doing so, however, they lose themselves a bit and are not happy in this one life. And if you want a fulfilled life yourself, you cannot skip the task just described, in your very personal life. Rather, you must be very aware that it is you who are in charge, and it is you who are setting the pace and progression of your personal awareness, growth, and abundance of life. You do this by very consciously concentrating on yourself and very consciously dealing with yourself and those circumstances that are constantly arising in your life. It is ultimately the essence of these conscious confrontations that make up your personal tools and your personal wealth.

The natural orders are a comprehensive (life) concept that originally arose in the energy-based realm of the elves and was then deepened and expanded in the energy-based realm of the beings of nature. In the meantime, it has been introduced on various other planets and it has been confirmed in many ways. The human habitat has been a habitat of great disorder for a long time and so, in the last few centuries there has been an increasing need to introduce the concept of natural orders into the human habitat. This with the aim of relieving the entire planet.

You can study the natural orders in many ways. However, you can only live them, actually live them, when you and your life have become essential. And so, the natural orders begin with the aspect of essentiality.

2. Essential

If you are essential, you are your essential self. That which remains, even when this one human incarnation is over. The respective human self, on the other hand, is usually a kind of role that consists of many different partial roles.

Biographically grown, influenced in many ways by other people and honed by all kinds of experiences. A human identity is a somewhat separate story, purely factual, seen from the outside. One that sometimes has very little to do with the actual nature of the respective person and only serves the purpose of presenting a suitable image to the outside world, which is benevolently accepted by the respective fellow human beings and yourself.

However, your human identity often takes you quite far away from your actual being. A being that is extremely beautiful and rich, but sometimes didn't fit into the diverse norms and human ideas and so (always a little more, over the years) was (had to, so many times) designed to fit. Within the framework of this suitable design, the respective essential self was often also deliberately concealed or dimmed in order to fit in or be accepted.

However, this behavior leads to the fact that the inner core is then more and more forgotten over the years and gets thus, lost to a certain extent in the course of human life. But with that, you've lost yourself and your current life fits your current human identity at best but doesn't necessarily correspond to you significantly. Something that leaves you unsatisfied and unfulfilled. Even if your days are packed with all sorts of activities and (apparent) rewards. You don't feel deeply fulfilled and you don't feel completely comfortable. No matter whatever you do to change this state. You lack essentiality. Your very own essentiality.

If you want to live a holistically healthy and fulfilling life, the main thing is to become essential. To discover your own inner being. To explore your own existing skills. To find out that you were not a "white blank slate" when you were born. Instead, you brought a wide range of experiences and skills with you. Skills you wanted to bring to this one life.

And so, from the point of view of the natural orders, a natural socialization / upbringing / basic education would begin with each person getting to know themselves in detail. A person must necessarily be connected to their own inner core in order to be able to consciously contribute their natural potential and to develop freely and significantly. And this aspect should also be included in the basic education of every human being. This, in turn, promotes personal responsibility from an early age. A very welcome side effect that also needs to be consciously strengthened, in human society.

If you like, consciously allow yourself to become essential and your very practical life to change more and more into a deeply essential life. Something that you can then consciously observe, provided it is allowed to develop freely.

In human living space, it is currently required to fit as optimally as possible and to create an identity that is as pleasing, successful and perfectly formed as possible for the outside world. However, this human identity is usually not really you and at the same time, you identify with it in an unconscious way. And if you like, take the topic with you into your next few days and let your own inner essential self show you how this is expressed in practical everyday life.

If the color of your current human identity, then begins to dissolve very slowly and carefully, this can repeatedly frighten and unsettle you. At the same time, I can assure you: underneath is neither hollow nor black.

Rather, behind your current human identity lies your actual, true being. A being that tends to be far more capable, attractive, and beautiful than your current human identity.

You in all your fullness.

2.1 The natural, essential size

Your conscious adherence to your current human identity prevents your natural size and thus also (your) life in the midst of natural orders. Your adherence to the societal demands to fit in, to subordinate yourself and to make yourself fit in general prevents an essential life. Your own essential life.

In the first few years of life, people are very consciously and immensely shaped. And you don't just have to be aware of these imprints, you also have to work on them very consciously in yourself, so that over time, you can detach yourself more and more from them. Said detachment, however, is imperative for you to move toward an essential life.

It requires your natural substantial size. Unvarnished, uncovered, angular and therefore neither adapted nor fitted. This happens as soon as you consciously allow it. However, you should be aware of the side effects involved. After all, your entire life begins to move and change once your natural size is fully in place.

If you no longer fit, you feel like you're standing next to human life, next to society and next to the action. Little grounded and slightly disoriented. The condition causes fear and insecurity inside you and so, the intuitive inner impulse to go back to safe settings as quickly as possible is quite understandable. However, being essential and living essential is much safer than it feels at first glance, and I would like to point this out in more detail in this chapter.

If you have become completely essential as a human being, you usually have a longer intensive path behind you. A path that has freed you from a wide range of dependencies and from many a setting that was never really suitable. And if you are then, fully essential, this feels extremely good. You are fine. Incredibly comfortable in this condition. However, the question now arises as to how one should live like this, since it has been suggested to you in many ways that you have to fit in and submit so that you are and remain part of human society and can make your own financial and material living. Are you just starting your own business now? Aren't you also involved and dependent in many ways, then? How does that work? Detached and now so completely different from what is commonly defined as appropriate and well defined?

Well, your essential self knows. And now at the latest it is good if you start to know your own inner voice, to listen to it and to trust it. Your path is unique because it is essentially tailored to you. No one on the outside can teach you or guide you in this regard. Your path is not someone else's path either. Your path is unique because it is your own personal path. Therefore, it is highly recommended to be in conscious